Letter From G. Cleveland.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, D. C., 1 October 23, 1887. EDITORS HOLT COUNTY SENTINEL:-Although this is Sunday, and I should be over at my church asking for strength to su-tain me through the trials and tribulations of the coming year, for I must say that I do not feel greatly encouraged over the prospect ahead of me as much as I did.I must confide in some one or extend the limits of my pantaloons, so I write to you. A retrespective glance reveals to me plainly that Mrs. Cleveland was the chief attraction from beginning to the end of our recent exmy excursion, for it is no more than "ours" at the best and sometimes I feel that I had no part in it. But to a man accustomed to deal with matters in a business way I feel that my chances for re-election are more stender than I am, and I think to "a man up a tree" it If I could in some way dispel the feeling that seems to have become general since wy-our late excursion, that I am the small end of this family, I would teel that I was not made in vain. Ali things seemed so propitious at the beginning of our journey. The weather was fine. We had matter- so arranged that we could and did pass through Ohio without coming in contact with the offensive partisan governor they

Then I had Greely arrange a good equinoctial storm for the discomfiture of those partisan paupers assembled in St. Louis the week before I went there and have it all over with by the time I started. The result was as we arranged for St. Louis, but somehow a miscalculation was made for the weather of the southern part of the trip which was far below the excellent standard desired and we came home in the condition I frequently do as a fisherman. I shall hold Greely responsible for any bad results that may follow the dampening of our ardour. When I say onr, hereatter. I mean me and my wife.

Then I had also arranged to pass through Springfield, Illinois, after night that our feelings might not urdergo that disturbed condition inevitable upon the passage of Lincoln's burial place in daylight, besides I wanted to display my sorrow in Tennessee where it would do the most good. You know I am running a business administration, and business is business whether we are dealing with life or with death. Besides if I had been sensibly affected at Springfield I could not have been so at Nashville, the barrowing effects of two such occasions would have worn me out.

When we reached St. Louis the ed. I see now plainty enough that the behind it all, only figured as Mrs. Cleve-

Then that pan-cake episode occurred Happily I did not knew of it then, else I would have been a pile of unhappiness the remainder of the journey. My wife, the dear creature, kept it from me, the pan-cake, and the way the waiter brought it to her. And that waiter, she doubtless was an emissary from the Anarchist camp and intended to blow us up. Thank the Lord she got the That was wholly inadequate though considering the offense. luck followed us to Kansas City where an immense crowd had assembled to see the exposition and when they discovered that the wife of the President of the United States and her busband were there, they desisted in looking at the wonder ful things on exhibition to pay their respects to us on account of the great office we were filling. I got some kind of rejuvenating chair at one of the drug stores around the Union Depot and proceeded to lay the corner stone of the Young Men's Christian Association While doing so the reflection forced itself upon me that events, like the rejuvensting elixir aloresaid, are curiously compounded. And here let me digress a moment to relate a circumstance. J.

II. Levy, whom you all know, is responsible for the statement that in the early history of Colorado when the early settlers procured all their supplies from the Missouri River, freights were consequently enormous, and it was necessary to economize as much as pos sible so the wholesale liquor dealers of that time made their exhiterating drinks out of concentrated lye, Platte River ous other attractive features which will make it more than ever indispensable to all students and lovers of art. Price weather was fair, as I had calculated, whisky. Necessity of course forced 35 cents a number. House.—There was quite an Izerwase in the receipts the past week and quality of hogs couning in very good. Since Saturday the market has shown more life and firmness. The cold weather seemed to encourage packets, they baying more freely during the week than for some time; and as a consequence values the past few days made quite an improvement. As compared with the close last week values at Kansas City were to higher, in Cheago 10 to 15c higher, and in 8t. Louis 25c higher, head while packers are buying more freely shippers are doing little. As the winter season is now virtually upon us, the market will from this forward be in the hands of packers and the luture short one, January and February will see a marked change for the better. Hence feedom should go slow and only send in their hope as they mature; holding back all that have not fix and weight until they accumulate some.

The extreme range Tuesday was $1 50 to $4 20. bulk of sales $4 30 to $4 40. The same date had your $3 70 to $4 10, bulk of sales $3 30 to $5 20.

Confessing Christ. Our last lesson closed with the commission of the Twelve. Their message was to be "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." They were to go everywhere preaching the Word; were givn power to work all kinds of miracles in proof of their commissions as from God; but they were to exercise this power with ne purpose on their part of personal gam or advantage of any kind. Taey were not, however, to look for a warm welcome among all classes. Many difficulties would arise and many perils would be experienced. The disciple must not expect to be "above his Master, nor the servant above his Lord." Jesus would on earn in thing from his followers. In the plathest and most explicit terms he told these aposities of persecutions and pains awailing them. They are to be as sheep in the midst of wolves. They will be discovared by their kinstolk and friends. But they must not fear, for the worst they could suffer wealthet he death of the body. For their confort they were assured that the eye of find would be ever upon them; that they would be che this hed by their heavenly Father as the apple of bia eye. Special promises and encouragements view given them, and special providences amounced as over them; a so special blossings upon them and on all who shall beed informers sage. Several most important things, however, are to be remembered.
